

Dear (name),

This past Sunday, during the homily at Mass, Father spoke about patience.

He spoke about the breakdown of civility in our society and how everyone wants to be first. First to get out of the parking lot, first to go through the stop sign, first in line. I found myself agreeing with him while I was in church. But yesterday at the store, I kept jumping from line to line trying to pick the fastest one. I failed miserably and left the store a little agitated. Boy did the Homily fall on deaf ears! At least it did on Sunday.

This after I was working on my Bible Study homework and guess what the message was? Patience. I suppose God has enough patience with me to send two message and one bad shopping experience to teach me what He thinks I need to know!

So today I am working on being patient. Hopefully when I get through it today I can start again tomorrow. May God bless you and keep you safe, and if you have time to pray for me, please pray for patience. 😊

Blessings,
